151 Margaret Sarah Lewis Original Watercolor Margaret Sarah Lewis Original Watercolor on Paper with added original preliminary pencil sketch on the revers. Dated to 1949 this piece is a contrast to the style previously favored by Lewis and highlights her shift to American Regionalism. This piece was likely purchased during her 1954 art show at the Maryland Institute of Art given the scene offered for sale is of the small towns in New Mexico that she preferred to depict. A prolific and formally trained artist originating from York Pa., Lewis has a remarkable career. She graduated from the Maryland Institute College of Art in 1929 and then obtained her B.S. (1937) and M.A. (1942) degrees from Columbia University Teachers College. Summer breaks from teaching allowed her to study with well-known watercolorists, such as Millard Sheets of California and New Englander Charles J. Martin. Recently, historians have been compiling an anthology of her work and are increasingly theorizing that the vast majority of her works are still in private collections and public offices across the country. She is also remembered for her teaching in York City schools, eventually becoming elementary supervisor of art for the system from 1929 to 1963. In addition, Lewis still found time to teach art to adults on evenings and Saturdays at the YMCA, York Junior College, York City Adult Education, and the Maryland Institute College of Art. Upon retirement from York City schools, she became chairman of the art teacher education department at Maryland ICA until 1972. Signed and dated 1949. Framed, under glass. Qty:1

152 Original Oil on Board Unknown Artist and unsigned. This Nocturne landscape painting is done in the American Modernist School style 1900-1930. Popularized by artist like Whistler and Vincent van Gogh. This piece exemplifies the American Landscape School of painting which popularized the romantic and untouched vast indigenous wilderness, uncorrupted by population. This was done to reflect the original idealism of the untamed and boundless prospects that were so pivotal to American ideology which is largely tied to the natural environment. Vintage / Antique. Not signed or dated. Label on back from Fred C. Hays and Company Inc. pictures - frames-mirrors 1237 G St. NW. Washington DC. Fred C. Hays 1871-1958 Qty:1

153 Early 20th Century Lithograph Early 20th Lithograph of Joseph Farquarson entitled Leaving the Hills. Farquarson, also known is circles as the Painting Laird, was born into the Scottish Aristocracy in 1846 and had a long and colorful career. His father did little to entertain his artistic passions and only allowed Farquarson to paint for a few hours on Saturday. Eventually having continued and developed his skills as an artist, he was formally trained at the Trustees Academy in Edinburgh during the 1860's under Peter Graham and then at the Life School at the Royal Scottish Academy. His most acclaimed works depict sheep in the Scottish countryside and typically has a provincial man or women at sunrise or sunset. This early 20h century Lithograph was done likely once Farquarson was elected as an associate of the Royal Academy. Framed, under glass. Qty:1
